

Dear Herzberg Family

First, let me say how utterly sorry I am for your loss. Eric was an incredible human being & the world has suffered a great loss. I feel so deeply for you all because I know how it feels to lose a loved one, last year my papa died of cancer. He was basically my dad. I know some days it doesn't even feel real that a person you've known your entire life is gone. Grief is weird. I didn't know a person my age could feel such a strong emotion. Such as that. Grief will leave you alone for days, maybe weeks, then sneak up on you one morning in a sunny street. When you think of him, think of it as a beautiful thing, think of him becoming a part of the earth, the sky & the world itself. Now he is at peace, basking in the clouds. Every beautiful sunset, every rain drop, every flower, forever & always a part of you. You're still here you know, under all the messy things, under all the stress, anxiety & the sadness, you're still you. Come up for some air. There are bright skies up here. You have to pull yourself up, I know you feel like you can't but I promise you you can. I believe in you more than you knew.

Sincerely J'Annah Sharp
